(From the Cleveland Weet Grower.) Weel Growern and Manufacturers

Convention. We hope every newspaper in the country friendly to the important interests of wool-growing and manufacturing, will publish the tollowing call for a convention to be held in Cleveland on the 4th day of August next.

WOOL GROWER'S CALL.

The subscribers having at heart the interest of the Wool-Growers of the West, suggest that a Fair be held at Cleveland at as early a day as convenient after shearing, for the purpose of exhibiting the different styles of wool, and that the awarding committee of manufacturers be selected from whom wool-growers will be likely to receive many suggestions which may prove useful in enabling them to select the most desirable style of wool to grow. We would further suggest,

1st. That Goodale & Co., of Cleves land be requested to make the necessary arrangements for carrying out this Fair.

2nd. That such competition be open to every wool grower in the Union,

3rd. That manufacturers be invited to attend such Fair. We believe that an interchange of views would result in the mutual benefit of manufacturers and wool-growers, whose interests are identical. We have in some sections of the country, Warket Fairs, for the sale of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, &c. In our judgment no article of farm produce would be more benefitted by Market Fairs than wood. We would, therefore recommend that the above-named firm offer to mannfacturers on the day of the Fair the wool which may be accumulated, and which may be for sale at the Cleveland

Wool Depot, This rian will be tolings man with competition by the large attendance of manufacturers, and will favorably impress all wool-growers with the importance of that Union and sytsem in marketting wools which seems so desirable.

Management of the Horse. Never attempt to clean or otherwise disturb your horse while eating his meals, unless you want him to bite and kick. But when you clean, take him out of the stall, and make a business of it. The your horse in the centre of the stall, unless you want him to do, as most horses do, drive more on one rein than on the other. Horses that are liable to cast themselves in their stalls, should be tied with neckhalters, giving them much more freedom of the head than the nose-lialter. Gentleness, firmness and moderation will subdue the most obdurate.

REPUBLICAR NOMINATION. FOR REPRESENTATIVE TO CONCRESS. PASTERN DISTRICT.

THOMAS DAVIS, OF NURTH PROVIDENCE

The Beginning of the End .-- Revolu tion in Tuecany.

By the last news from Europe we find confirmed the intelligence of the Revolution in Tuscany. Without a drop of blood, without an effort of resistance, a monarch has fled from his capital to shelter himself from the storm which impends over the devoted penin-ula.

The superior officers of the Tustan troop. (15,000 men), presented themselves to the Grand Duke at Florence, and declared to him that to prevent the revolt of his army there was only one way, viz, to unite with Piedmost and to unfurl the tricolor flag of Italian independence. The Grand Duke, by the advice of his Ministers, immediately sent for the Marquis of Lujatico (of the Corvini family, and one of the best known and wealthiest men of, Tuscany), and begged him to form a new administration with the view of giving the reforms that were wanted. The Marquis of Lajatico answered that he could not undertake so important and difficult a task, or save the dynasty, except on two conditions : First, the abdication of his Imperial Highness; second, a declaration of war against Austria, and an alliance with France and Piedmont.

The Grand Duke refused to subscribe to these conditions, and declared he would quit Tuscany immediately, and without making any provision for a legal and regul lar government, leaving the Tuscans to do what they pleased.

On Monday, April 27th, the Grand Duke announced to the Diplomatic Corps that being deserted by his troops, he had resolved upon quitting Tuscany with his family. He lett for Bologna the same evening, attended by an except of hidner,-A Provisional Government was formed.

Additional news received at Turin reporte that Victor Emanuel has been proclaimed Dictator of Tuscany, and Of all the Italian States, south of Piedmost, Tuscany is undoubtedly the one ure of political freedom as any of its neighbors. In general order, and the respect of private rights it has enjoyed an ad untage over most of them. Its beautiful capital has always presented in its cheerful and animated air a pleasant contrast to those mosses of filth, degradation, and cowardice which make up the lower stratum of other Italian cities: and its rural departments are at least prosperous enough to please the traveler's eye as he crosses the frontier from the poverty and neglect of the Pontifical States. (It may be said here, in a parenthesis, that we much mistake if we suppose the House of Hapsburg to be tyrents in the vulgar sense of the word .-Never in their policy has there been anything of that petty injustice to the worker of the soi, to the artizen and menial which has distinguished the Bourbon race. From the time when Rudalph of Hapsburg saved the peasants from the cruelty of the robber knights, his descendants, however absolute, or fanatical, or seifish, have pursued the policy of founding their power upon a respect for private rights. Grossly unjust to nationalities, tyrants in their political relations, they have probably as little personal oppression to answer for as any race that ever sat in troublous times on a European throne). Neither was the Grand Duke personally unpopular. His previous course has been that of a kindhearted and liberal-minded man, without governing qualities and without faith in the copular capacity for self-government : an incredulity which would grow upon a man in Italy if any where in this world .-About sixty years of age, and born to the throne he now occupies, he has seen his father successively Grand Duke of Tuscan; a fugitive, Duke of a secularized bishopric (Luneville,) again a wanderer, and finally restored to Tuscany. He himself ascended the throne at the age of twentyseven, and has signalized his reign by many improvements in the physical and moral condition of his people. The natural result followed: the Italians, utterly incapable of self government revolted in 1848, and drove him with the other monarcha of haly into exile by an outbreak, whose only effect was to bring down upon of the most delighted places that nature them the power of the greater monarchies, and to make Tuscany more than ever beresort here during the summer months, fore an appanage and dependent of Ansfor recreation and unusement, and tria. But for this we might now find Leowith music both vocal and instrumenfoold acting with the King of Sardinia, in avor of Italian nationality, instead of obeying the Austriana,

The significance of this result to those feet from their busy, fastened to each, from bent deninted with European politics, which is success must be chieff in two things. First, that

It is no common Propaganda which has been at work in Italy since the Autumn of 1868. Nearly every man among the edu- floding many willing cars and ready by cated classes who has not been absolutely lievers. connected by ties of personal interest with the ruling powers has been a member of it.

same kind to record within the next few other of the smaller Potentates were far more hateful to their people than was ever this fogitive Grand Dake of the Tuscans. That portion, indeed, of the Italian soil on which the Austrian armies are encambed, or which is commanded by their fortresses, is Austrian-not a square rood

"Would," says the London Times, "that we could see the independence of the Italian people,—would that we could see a regener ted Italy at the end of this struggle! But when the Italians, hy French helps-should this be the even —have chased the should this be the even—have chased the Austria: s from their peninsular, who will belp them to drive away the French?—When we think of the hangings, and shootings, and oppressions of the French to the southward of the Alps in former days, it is difficult to decide whether they or the Austrians have been the sterner taskmasters of Italy. The Austrians at least never led or drove the youth of Italy to the alambles by wholesale, as did the first Nableon, nor are we aware that they have poleon, nor are we aware that they have ever plandered the museums and churches of Italy in the same way as that warmhearted friend of the Italian race."

The Thunderer may save its vain regrets. That the Italians of our day can be a free, self-governing people is beyond the reach of boldest hope. That they possibly may be united under the skillul guidance of the Sardinian Court, and thus at last become a nationality is the best thing to which reasonable men can look as the termination of this period of chaos

DORRVILLE, R. 1.

MAY 7th, 1859. To the Editor of the Newport Daily

Your Canvasser, who is a friend of mine called upon me a few days since, and requested me occasionally, as my time and business would admit, to lavor your readers with the general news and incidents of the day, as they occur in this part of the Narragansett Vineyard. Derrville is situated on the line of the Providence and Stonington rallroad, on the south bank of the Paweatuck river; in the extreme northeast corner of the town of Westerly, being about five miles east of building that attracts our notice is the school house, situated on an elevation of some thirty feet above the village. It is thirty by forty-five feet on the ground, and el-gantly finished, with a beliry, and enclo ed with a beautiful picket-funce. Miss Phebe J. Babcock, of Hopkinton, is instructress for the opening Spring term, and will probably average flity scholars. next pass to notice the store and buildings reared by Charles Vars, near by to the situation, and of which its owner need he proud. Continuing along the single street, we arrive at the bank building, which is some sixty rods from the Depot from the right, and was built of the blue granite, by S. P. Wells & Co., who own a quarry some two miles at the south or the village, in which hey are now employing some twelve or fifteen men, shipping their stones to various places at the south and west. The stones that are taken from this quarry are unsurpassed in beauty and excellence and durability in New England. Passing on about one fourth of a mi e, we shall in our walk pass a number of cottages, the meeting house, and grist mill, arriving at the bridge which crosses the river at its bend. "Shattoch's line-bridge," it was anciently called, but is now known as "the bridge of accidents" because of the many lives that have been lost there. We nowfind ourselves at the extreme north end of the village, but as we turn our eyes to the westward in the direction which the river non takes after making the bend at the bridge, and we see, some twenty-five rods from us, the dam, over which a mighty tide of waters is rushing, falling some eight feet. A large manufacturing establishment is at the left of the dum, where some eighty looms for making linsies, kerseys, flanner and satinetts, are in operation, employing, in all the different departments of one of the mills, some two hundred operatives. It some four or six nozen in a capacious is owned by Wager Weeden, of Westerly, bis son, Dr. J. E. Weeden, of Westerly, hard. Then, after carefully removing is a beauti us pine grove, some of the trees having grown to such an enormous size and allspice, a few races of ginger, and a so hear each other that their tops form, as few cloves of garlie. LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

The stoppage of the Providence steam er yesterday would have played the diskens with the mails, had it not been for the promptitude of our energetic Postmaster he Atkinson, who sent the mail for Providence off on horseback to overlake the Fall River stage, and telegraphed to the Postmaster at Providence, to send the return mail by way of Fall River. By this arrangement the muil from here reached Providence by stage at 4 1-2 o'clock, and here from Providence by the New York boat, at 9 P. M., the office being kept apen until that time, for the purpose of distributing Mr. Atkinson is deserving of much credit for his exertions in this matter

A stranger once remarked in relation to Newport, that it had the most beautiful ladies. the most healthy climate, and the shabbles sidewalks; of any city in New England. Wo presume its inhabitants will have no hesitatio in pleading "guilty" to the first two counts in this indictment, and eaunot see how they can very well avoid doing the same by the third; habbler sidewalks never disgraced any city than line both sides of Thames Street its entire length; and what is worse than all the rest, no sleps seem to be taken to improve them.

The City Authorities of Fall River have appropriated $100 for the colebration of the approaching anniversary of our National Independence. What will Newport do on that opposition? We trust the experience of jest than to keep Newport people and Newport money from being attracted to other places.

The Jenny Lind steamer started on her regular trip to Providence yesterday morning, but after proceeding as far as Consters Harbor returned, being unable to make headway against the heavy wind and sea in the bay above, which is represented as being of more than ordinary height, even for heavy weather

It is said that as 'lection day draws near, the Newport hous are being fed on dyc-Way Station, which is truly a beautiful stuff, to enable thom to supply the domand for blue eggs which that occasion always calls forth.
